COMMERCIAL BLUEPRINT READING FOR CONSTRUCTION

Course Description:

Understanding how to read a set of construction documents is important to people working in the construction industry. "Blueprint" is the historic name for construction documents. Contractors build the design and follow the construction processes detailed in the "blueprints."

This quick-start approach exposes participants to the fundamental inner workings of construction drawings and specifications and works systematically through the various disciplines. This course uses both hard copy and on-screen plans to fully demonstrate the techniques being taught.

By the conclusion of this class, participants will be able to work themselves through a set of construction documents, and understand and apply the inter-connectivity between the drawings.

Day 1 - Civil & Architectural

Day 2 - Structural & Electrical, Plumbing & Mechanical

Target Audience: This class is designed to help trades professionals, journeypeople, drafters, designers and architectural and engineering interns.
